Editorial Not enough hours in the day, month, year!

I was r兔biting on last month about retirement, and how far off that is. It still is a possibility that the lotto fairies will rain on me, but until then I have left the shiny seat of the office environment behind and perched myself back behind the steering wheel. Unfortunately this requires regular shift work until one of my colleagues actually does retire next year and I will take his place working daylight hours again.

I raise this perspective as I am finding it difficult to juggle the position of Secretary and turn up to Committee meetings and General meetings then run home grab a couple of hours kip and get back into it. Doing 14 hours and 10 and a half hours, alternating daily puts the sleep bank into deficit if I have to attend a meeting. I would much rather come to grief on the track (which I seem to be getting rather good at!) than on the road:

SO YOU ARE ON NOTICE:- We need another Secretary, please give this some consideration, I will be able to maintain my role as Editor, but the attendances at the meetings will drop off in the meantime and others on the Committee will be given extra work. Work that another could easily cope with and all assistance is appreciated.

Stay Upright #77

Presidents Report

I guess you never stop learning, as I found out when Sharon from MSA advised that we need to book our use of the hall annually. This meant putting off our March committee meeting by 2 days, and almost caused a date clash with our February presentation meeting.

I was particularly pleased that our patron, Len Dyson, and his lovely wife Joan, were able to attend, and that we could present them with a card, signed by those present, commemorating their 65 years of wedded bliss.

Other welcome guests were our friends from the Atujara club, who attend for the presentation of the "Les Diener Memorial". This time, its second year as an Interclub competition, they won it! We shall be trying doubly hard to get it back in 2011!

Great that Simon Cook was also present, as he doesn't just live around the corner. As well as giving him the Period 4 award from 2010, I could reiterate that he'd won the Ken Blake Trophy yet again, this time being 3 years on the trot.

Unlucky rider was Phil Baughan, 2nd overall, 2nd in Period 3, 2nd in Period 4, but no cigar!

Our "Peter Pan", the evergreen Peter Strawhan, topped the Period 5 point score after winning the Len Dyson "Rookie" award last year, which now resides with Danny's neighbour Chris Hayward.

Tony Tildesley was a worthy winner of "Clubman of the Year", as he'd made our activities at Tailem Bend happen, and Graham Rowley/Terry Hutchinson and Geoff Grant /Craig Lawson took the three-wheeled awards in Periods 2 and 4 respectively.

Somehow, I scored an unusual double, the "Peter Westerman Trophy" and "Pass the Spanners", graciously handed to me by Andrew Bannerman. I must work out how that happened! Seriously, there were less opportunities for us than in previous years, as the points accrued will show, and 2011 may well continue that trend. As the Café Racer meeting on 2nd and 3rd April at Mac Park is not catering for Period 3, here is an opportunity for an enterprising Period 4 or 5 rider to get off to a flying start.

Sadly, at 4am on Saturday March 5th, Claire's mother passed away, and I'm sure you'll all join me in passing our condolences to Claire and her family.

CLARKE'S COMMENT

By the time you read this, my education will have improved. I can't say that about my typing.

Roger Klobe from Hamilton in Western Victoria is a long time friend of mine, and he lives about 8-10km from Les Toohey. Roger is a Norton man, as much as Les is a BSA stalwart.

Adorning the shed of the Klobe residence, amongst other tasty things are a pair of Norton Internationals; a 1949 iron motored plunger with questionable brakes, a beautiful and artistic creation, and a 1953 all alloy Inter, aeons away in design and appearance despite only 4 years between birthdays. It is one of only a very few all alloy Inter's made by the factory in a Featherbed frame, and has the Manx cambox with open valve gear. Oil sealing at the top is not its forte.

It also has a TT carburettor. HAD the TT carburettor. That was the purpose of the trip. The '49 has Inter cams, but the '53 has Manx cams with longer timing and more overlap, and it is nigh on impossible to start without pushing. Attempts at kick starting were essentially fruitless. Its manners about town could be described as fractious, and that would be polite. Once in the open and ridden with verve, all is fine, but the gearing is very tall.

Let me illustrate. In a 4 speed gearbox, the change from first to second is about 25 mph, second to third at 35-40mph, third to top at about 55mph, and it does not settle until about 75mph. The policeman does not like that, and the Speedo is accurate.

To refine the behaviour and add some civility, conversion to Amal Mk2 was the choice. Installation and tuning therefore was the primary purpose of the trip, aiming for kick starting hot and cold along with civilian tractability.

A local genius artisan in metal made a manifold, I made the cable, and away we went. Or so I thought. The bloody thing flooded madly as soon as we turned the fuel on! With the fuel bowl off, all was well, the needle and seat had no foreign matter, and flow stopped as it should when connected. Crud on the needle and seat in these Amals can be an irritating problem, because the fuel flow is UP into the bowl (Mikuni flows down) so rather than flush away to the bottom of the bowl; any crud eddies around in the seat housing. On top of that, apart from hitting the seat fitting from below, float height is not adjustable, and therein lays the problem. When assembled, the float level was so high; the float itself hit the carby body before rising far enough to shut off the fuel flow. I had a spare gasket, so we put that in as a second layer, and hey presto! Cured.

It still wouldn't start cold, with or without the choke (enrichening lever), however it did settle to a nice idle once going. Out the road on a suitable stretch with a longish gentle climb, plug chop colours at all throttle settings to $\frac{3}{4}$ were good. Moving the jetting one step richer at each stage went too far, so back to the initial guess we asked for in the new carby, which was supplied by Murray Johnson.

Ridability became SWEET, an experience to be treasured; absolutely transformed into a lovely enjoyable trip. And it started first kick every time when hot to boot.

In the late afternoon, we took both the '49 and '53 over to Toohey's for a brag trip, inspecting his newly finished BSA Catalina scrambler in between discussing trenches, weeds and the weird weather.

I was still not happy with the starting. On Sunday morning, I took out the jet from the enrichening circuit altogether to see if that made a difference. It drowned the plug in two kicks. When I went to put it back, I noticed that it was a PLUG, not a jet. However, there was another JET in the carby body I wasn't sure of, so I left it be and went home, looking at an exploded parts diagram of a Mk2 later, and pulled apart a carby from the Yamaha to check. Lo and behold.....light at the end of the jet!

THE GOOD OIL

A(ni)mal Mk2 carbs have available TWO idle jet positions; one for 4-stroke, one for 2-stroke, and a blanking plug for the unused hole. At the factory, the idle jets had been put on BOTH positions, and the blanking plug in the starting circuit! Oh Dear! Oh Dear!

A quick phone call to Roger had him on the spanners, way out of his comfort zone doing fine fiddly things changing the jets to the right spots. Tah Dah! It started FIRST KICK! But, and there is always a but, the idle mixture, now running on only one smallish jet is way too lean, so today I am posting him four alternative jets to play with for best idle.

That all sounded like a bit of a chore, but I actually enjoyed the process. I do like to tinker, you know, and the satisfaction of a good outcome makes it sweeter.

Off to the Post Office now with those extra jets!
